

A Bug's Life in the City: The Often Unseen Biodiversity that Surrounds Us and Why It Matters

April 28, 2018 Kottman Hall OSU Columbus Campus

Participants will learn of our research findings and view the rich fauna found within vacant lots. Attendees will also learn about the Ohio Bee Atlas and how to participate in bee citizen science programs.

Program Schedule

9:00-9:30 Registration, Light Breakfast and Coffee Kottman Hall Atrium (First Floor)

9:30-10:30 Vacant Land as a Conservation Resource for Insects (Mary Gardiner)

10:30-12:30 Breakout Microscope Sessions

Session 1: Arthropod Predators

Session 2: Wild Pollinators

1230-1:45 Lunch and Learn: The Pollination Investigators Program (Mary Gardiner)

1:45-2:45 The Ohio Bee Atlas and Summer Bee Blitzes (Denise Ellsworth)

3:00 Book Sale and Signing: Mary will be signing copies of her book Good Garden Bugs: Everything You Need to Know about Beneficial Predatory Insects

Cost: $30 (students $20) Includes a light breakfast, boxed lunch, citizen scientist supplies, and predatory insect ID card

Register by pasting this link into your browser: <http://go.osu.edu/bugcity>